

Diachronica template

Claire Bovern
Executive Editor, Diachronica

May 24, 2021

Abstract

Here's an abstract of about 150 words

Keywords: templates, fonts, examples, bibliography

1 Introduction

We've provided this template for L^AT_EX users to submit articles to Diachronica. Note that it's very minimal. That's deliberate! It is far easier for the typesetters to typeset your article if there is minimal styling.¹ There are a number of points about this template which do not conform to the final style for published articles. However, this template is optimized to make the preparation of the submitted manuscript as straightforward as possible.

Here's an example of a sentence with glossed text.

(1) Bardi (Bovern 2012: 123)

Ardiyooloon Bardi ngaanka
One.Arm.Point Bardi language

'One Arm Point Bardi'

Note that the translation has single quotes. However, a quotation from an individual "should have double quotes," (me, pers. comm. 2021).

Here's an example of a table:

Table 1: Caption

one	a
two	b

And here's an example of a figure:

¹Here's an example of a footnote. Note that we do acknowledgements at the end of the paper, not as footnotes to the title or the first section.

Figure 1: Caption

2 Other notes

This template should use XeLaTeX and unicode: here's η, an engma. Here's [daɪəkʰɪɒɪkʰə]. Feel free to change the font if you don't like junicode.

3 Conclusion

In conclusion, we use the `unified` stylesheet for linguistics. For further details, please consult the style guide, available from the journal's homepage at <https://benjamins.com/catalog/dia>.

Funding information

Grant or other funding acknowledgements should go here.

Acknowledgements

Thanks to Juhyae Kim for comments on this template.

Abbreviations

A list of abbreviations used in the text should appear here.

References

Bowern, Claire. 2012. A grammar of Bardi. Berlin: Mouton de Gruyter.

A Information about appendices

If you have any Appendices, this is where they would appear.

Résumé

French summary goes here

Zusammenfassung

German summary goes here

Author's address

Claire Bower
Department of Linguistics
Yale University
370 Temple St
NEW HAVEN, CT

`claire.bowern@yale.edu`